

Freedom

We once lived free –to roam the land,

But before long, we were bound by chains,

Following white laws, ours forgotten,

Our culture fragmented, never to be the same again,

Land and children ripped away, all because we were dark-skinned,

Now hollow empty souls, white man has sinned,

Sorry day, acknowledgement to country,

The government is now trying hard,

We yearn for a day with rights respected,

Black and white, side by side.
